During the Second World War many Australians served on the home front in the armed forces, and civilians devoted themselves to the national effort, working in volunteer defence and in rural and urban industries geared to wartime production.

anzacportal.dva.gov.au

PEACE!